Never Miss an Opportunity to say "I Trust You!" Increase Your Bottom Line by Developing More Trust Within Your Organization

Trust is the "ONE thing that changes EVERYTHING!" (Stephen M.R. Covey)

Any business or organization needs to be concerned with the bottom line. The bottom line could be profit or how an organization serves it's "customers." The level of trust that exists in your workplace, among staff, between staff and management, and between your organization and it's "customers," is directly related to the bottom line. The less trust that exists in your organization, the longer it takes to get things done, and the more costly the operation. The opposite is also true.

In this workshop, participants will:

- Examine the levels of trust the currently exist in their organization.
- Discover new ways to increase those trust levels.
- Understand how higher levels of trust lead to better organizational efficiency, productivity and staff morale.

We will use music, games, and other creative innovative tools to get you where you need to go.
Don't miss out on this opportunity!!

Elevate Your Business Motivate, Mentor, and Retain Human Capital

The employee market has changed dramatically over the last 2 years, and yet challenges still remain. First, how do you engage and motivate your current employees and manage to optimize their performance? By creating a positive workplace experience and a solid internal career path, employees are motivated to produce superior results.

Second, how can you source and recruit better talent for your team? Mentoring existing staff is also a key part of this equation. People motivated by fear of losing their jobs become disenfranchised and act as though their path to success and their company's path to success do not run in the same direction.

Third, how will this make your business better in the long run? These questions are answered with more information on the ever-present Human Capital puzzle.

Learning objectives include:

- Organizational costs for under-performing staff
- Benefits to motivating current staff versus the costs to having vacant positions or recruiting and training new staff
- Common problems with human capital and how to solve these problems

- Steven Davidson, Managing Director, Pursuit Placement Group Ltd.
